

From "Business Biographies" in the Farm Bureau News, Sept. 21, 1933:
The Farm Bureau News was published by the Island County Farm Bureau in Oak Harbor, WA between 1920 and 1950.

R. L. MAYLOR

Ray Maylor, Island County Clerk since 1922 and proprietor of the Maylor Motor Company, literally "grew up" with Oak Harbor.

Born in 1896 on Maylor's Point, the oldest son of Alfred Maylor, Raymond began school in 1901, the first year the present building was constructed, attended high school and was graduated in 1914 a member of Oak Harbor's first high school class. Four other persons were graduated in this class.

"When I first started to high school, there was no building and we held classes in a hall above one of the stores," Maylor recounted, "Then high school was built in 1912,"

Maylor attended Washington State College one year and an engineering school in Seattle one year. In 1917 he enlisted and spent 15 months in the service. Most of this time was spent in destroyer patrol work. After the war he located in Everett where he was employed in a machine shop until 1921 when he moved back to the farm.

"In 1922 a friend suggested that I run for the office of County Auditor," Maylor said. 'At first I didn't give the matter serious thought, but later decided to try for the office. I was elected."

He has spent two terms as County Auditor and is now completing a term as County Clerk and Auditor.

It was not until early 1931 that Maylor considered establishing a garage in Oak Harbor. In June, 1931, he established the Maylor Motor Company and at present, besides operating an up-to-date garage business, handles several lines of merchandise including Chevrolet automobiles and Philco radios. Maylor enjoys mechanical work as well as accounting.

"When it comes to recreation I like hunting with my dog, 'Pep' a Springer Spaniel," he said, pointing as evidence of the chase to two deer heads mounted in the garage office. I enjoy duck hunting, too.

Mr. and Mrs. Maylor have been married since 1917 and they have a daughter, Marjorie. Maylor is a member of the town council and is the newly-elected president of the Oak Harbor Commercial Club.

R. L. MAYLOR

Ray Maylor, Island County Clerk since 1922 and proprietor of the Maylor Motor Company, literally "grew up" with Oak Harbor.

Born in 1896 on Maylor's Point, the oldest son of Alfred Maylor, Raymond began school in 1901, the first year the present building was constructed, attended high school and was graduated in 1914 a member of Oak Harbor's first high school class. Four other persons were graduated in this class.

"When I first started to high school, there was no building and we held classes in a hall above one of the stores," Maylor recounted, "Then the high school was built in 1912."

Maylor attended Washington State College one year and an engineering school in Seattle one year. In 1917 he enlisted and spent 15 months in the service. Most of this time was spent in destroyer patrol work. After the war he located in Everett where he was employed in a machine shop until 1921 when he moved back to the farm.

"In 1922 a friend suggested that I run for the office of County Auditor," Maylor said. "At first I didn't give the matter serious thought, but later decided to try for the office. I was elected."

He has spent two terms as County Auditor and is now completing a term as County Clerk and Auditor.

It was not until early 1931 that Maylor considered establishing a garage in Oak Harbor. In June, 1931, he established the Maylor Motor Company and at present, besides operating an up-to-date garage business, handles several lines of merchandise including Chevrolet automobiles and Philco radios. Maylor enjoys mechanical work as well as accounting.

"When it comes to recreation I like hunting with my dog, 'Pep' a Springer Spaniel," he said, pointing as evidence of the chase to two deer heads mounted in the garage office. "I enjoy duck hunting, too."

Mr. and Mrs. Maylor have been married since 1917 and they have a daughter, Marjorie. Maylor is a member of the town council and is the newly-elected president of the Oak Harbor Commercial Club.